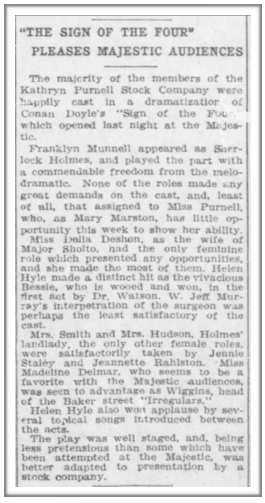
Franklyn Munnell



"THE SIGN OF THE FOUR"
PLEASES MAJESTIC AUDIENCES

The majority of the members of the Kathryn Purnell Stock Company were happily cast in a dramatization of Conan Doyle's "Sign of the Four," which opened last night at the Majestic.

Franklyn Munnell appeared as Sherlock Holmes, and played the part with a commendable freedom from the melodramatic. None of the roles made any great demands on the cast, and, least of all, that assigned to Miss Purnell, who, as Mary Marston, has little opportunity this week to show her ability.

Miss Isalla Deshon, as the wife of Major Sholto, had the only feminine role which presented any opportunities, and she made the most of them. Helen Hyle made a distinct hit as the vivacious Bessie, who is wooed and won, in the first act by Dr. Watson. W. Jeff Murray's interpretation of the surgeon was perhaps the least satisfactory of the cast.

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Hudson, Holmes' landlady, the only other female roles, were satisfactorily taken by Jennie Staley and Jeannette Rahlston. Miss Madeline Delmar, who seems to be a favorite with the Majestic audiences, was seen to advantage as Wiggins, head of the Baker street "Irregulars."

Helen Hyle also won applause by several topical songs introduced between the acts.

The play was well staged, and, being less pretensious than some which have been attempted at the Majestic, was better adapted to presentation by a stock company.
