OXFORD HARROVIANS' PLAY.

"THE SPECKLED BAND."

There was a crowded audience in the Speech Room, Harrow, on Saturday night, when the Oxford Harrovian Dramatic Society gave the first production of this year's play, "The Speckled Band," by Sir A. Conan Doyle. There were no vacant seats and visitors had to be excluded. The staging took up a good deal of the room but it was admirably arranged. "The Speckled Band" provided all the thrills which one could wish for, and the excitement of seeing Sherlock Holmes in the flesh, with dressing gown, pipe, violin, cocaine complete, was intense. The story worked up to a delightfully horrible climax and a sigh of relief went up when the very charming Enid Stoner was saved from a horrible death by Sherlock Holmes who triumphed over the machinations of the wickedest of wicked stepfathers. Sherlock Holmes was admirably played by G. A. Gardiner, and Dr. Ryle—the stepfather—was in the hands of T. F. Coade. These two with M. S. McCorquodale (Dr. Watson), Miss Eileen Coade (Enid Stoner), and Mrs. Charles Bartlett (Mrs. Staunton), bore the honour of the play. Other parts admirably done were taken by G. W. Howe, butler; the Hon. R. P. Bouverie, All, an Indian servant; P. H. M. Bryant, the village grocer; H. B. Bathurst Norman, the coroner. The last-named was especially good and made an excellent investigator. Smaller parts were taken by A. D. Whitehead, Mr. Scott Wilson; P. S. H. Bryant, foreman of the jury; E. C. Smith, R. J. Dickinson, W. A. Mowbray, clients of Sherlock Holmes; G. C. Downs-Butcher, page; and there was a life-like array of jurors, Press and policemen.

Applause was generous and at the conclusion the principal characters were called before the curtain and received further evidence of favour, the two ladies being handed beautiful bouquets. Mr. T. F. Coade, in a few brief words, thanked all those who had assisted in the play and the Headmaster for permitting them "to make such a mess of the Speech Room."

Mr. T. F. Coade was the able manager; Mr. G. A. Gardiner, his capable assistant; manager. In these capacities neither stage manager. Neither in these capacities could have been improved upon.

Moonshine

Snoo Wilson frankly describes his new play as Fowle Papers, a mess in need of clearing up either by the theatre's Jenny Topper, who commissioned it, or Simon Stokes, who stages it.

At the heart of the piece is a promising plot along the lines of Alan Bennett's Kafka's Dick as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle comes to terms with the loss of Sherlock Holmes after killing him in the fatal tussle with Moriarty at Richenbach Falls.

Robin Soans, as Doyle, even does Dr Watson's bowler for a heart to heart with Ian Gelder's exuberant, pipe-puffing Holmes in the great detective's study at 221b Baker Street, and the play opens with a brief exploration of Doyle's involvement in fake fairy photography and spiritualism.

But hopes of a rational evening are suddenly dashed as Doyle is catapulted into a cataclysmic quantum world at the end of its tether. Holmes is Abraxas, a verbose sun god locked in mortal combat with the malevolent Moloch (Peter Jordfield), a thinly-disguised portrayal of Rupert Murdoch.

Adding to the confusion, Moloch's twin daughters (Sarah Cartwright and Lisa Ellis) are squealing, kilted weird sisters from Macbeth. Pui Fan Lee's Edwardian photographer discards her Jaeger costume to become a wind-up android and Ingeborge Diapkunaite shouts shrill protests in her underwritten role as an hysterical goddess.

Robin Don provides a typically ingenious setting of hydraulic platforms and flying saucers on wires, but the production's best effects come from Gelder and Soanes, who bring conviction to their mind-numbing dialogue.

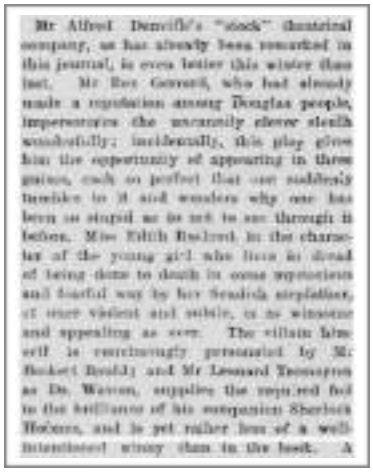
Ray Gerrell



Mr Alfred Denville's "stock" theatrical company, as has already been remarked in this journal, is even better this winter than last. Mr Ray Gerrell, who had already made a reputation among Douglas people, impersonates the uncannily clever stealth wonderfully; incidentally, this play gives him the opportunity of appearing in three guises, each so perfect that one suddenly hesitates to it and wonders why one has been so stupid as to not to see through it before. Miss Edith Rockett in the character of the young girl who lives in dread of being done to death in some mysterious and fearful way by her Swedish stepfather, of once violent and subtle, is as winsome and appealing as ever. The villain himself is convincingly personated by Mr. Basket Reddy and Mr Leonard Thompson as Dr. Watson, supplies the required foil to the brilliance of his companion Sherlock Holmes, and is yet rather less of a well-intentioned ninny than in the book. G.H. Gillett

There was a crowded audience at Allhallows School, Honiton, on Saturday, when a performance was given of Sherlock Holmes' play "The Speckled Band" by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. This is the most ambitious effort ever attempted by the school players, and each character was well represented. The outstanding characters were Mr G.H. Gillett, who most ably portrayed the part of Sherlock Holmes, Mr H.A. Lee as Dr Grimesby Rylott, and D.S.C. Dew as Dr Rylott's step-daughter, Miss Enid Stonor, wee a great success. The play was staged in an effective way by Mr G. Napier. During the performance selections were rendered by the orchestra, the instrumentalists being Mrs Billingsley, Misses Gibbs and F.M. Smith, and Mr J.J. Shepherd.

Sherlock Holmes selection

On August 17, a new play will premier at the Dorset Playhouse, Dorset, Vt. The Penultimate Problem of Sherlock Holmes reveals one of the most intriguing cases the master of detection ever investigated. Written by the great-grandnephew of Dr. John Watson, friend and associate of Sherlock Holmes, this new play chronicles Holmes' inquiry into the world of the supernatural.

Each season the Dorset Summer Theatre festival presents a new work by an American playwright. The Penultimate Problem of Sherlock Holmes is this year's choice.

It will feature Francois de la Giroday in the role of Sherlock Holmes. Fran-

Baker Theater.

"Sherlock Holmes" with all of his charm, and interest, his philosophy, and his power to win new friends, even as he has power to hold old ones, is back at the Baker Theater this week, through the art of Vaughan Glaser. Mr. Glaser's conception of Sherlock Holmes is something that will please those who love the delightful stories of romance and adventure, which Sir Conan Doyle has wound about him. Physically he resembles the figure which artists have drawn of Sir Conan's hero and the impersonation of the slow moving, deliberate acting, intellectual whirlwind is the kind of work in which he delights. His Sherlock Holmes is a living, breathing reality. As Mr. Glaser excels in the quiet, strong moments of any bit of character acting, he excels in portraying Sherlocks Holmes because it is all quiet and strong, and full of sustained interest.

The version of the play used is that made by William Gillette for his own use —one of the few contributions of really high-class melodrama that have been made to the modern stage. It is beautifully staged, and there is an agreeable musical setting. The company takes hold and plays with fine esprit de corps—in fact "Sherlock Holmes" is quite up to the high standard which Mr. Glaser and his company have taught the public to expect.

Thomas Henry Gleeny

ALLEGED THEFT BY AN ACTOR.
A "SHERLOCK HOLMES" ARRESTED.

Thomas Henry Gleeny, an actor, was charged on Monday with stealing a dressing gown belonging to Harold St. Clair, a theatrical manager, but the case collapsed.

The Chief Constable explained that the defendant had been employed at the Hippodrome the previous week, and it was alleged that he stole the dressing gown of the value of £1 10s. from the dressing property. Mr. Gleeny was an actor, and had played the part of "Sherlock Holmes." He had been in the habit of wearing the gown. During the week-end, information was brought to the police station that the gown was missing from the theatre. Detective Lesson then took the matter in hand, and on the Sunday arrested Gleeny at the railway station. In the hamper was found the missing dressing gown. Mr. Gleeny's explanation was that Mr. Clair, the proprietor of the company, owed him some salary, and he simply took the dressing gown as his own. He (the Chief Constable) said that Clair, the prosecutor, did not appear, indeed they had learnt that he left Blackpool by the last train on Sunday evening. Under the circumstances he was not prepared to offer any evidence.

Mr. Gleeny said he wished to make a statement to the effect that——

The Chairman: Well, you are discharged.

Mr. Gleeny: Thank you.
