"THE SPECKLED BAND."

Founded upon an absorbing story by Conan Doyle, "The Speckled Band," to be produced by Carl Lawson and his players at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Saturday, is an absorbing drama, introducing the super-sleuth, Sherlock Holmes. The action for the most part takes place in the home of Dr. Grimesby Rylett, in rural England, and the consulting room of the great detective in London. Rylett, who, by his domineering authority holds his household in subjection, is attempting to obtain possession of the inheritance of his step-daughter, Eudi Stainer. His sister Violet had died while engaged to be married, and Eudi appears to be similarly succumbing to some mysterious ailment. Sherlock Holmes gains admittance to the Rylett house as a butler, and soon penetrates the awful plot upon which the doctor is relying to dispose of Eudi. A thrilling climax takes place when Rylett introduces a venomous serpent into the girl's room. Driven out by a light blow from Holmes, the reptile retreats, and in a moment the appearance of the doctor shrieking madly with the serpent coiled around his neck, foreshadows the fate of the would-be murderer. Carl Lawson will be seen as Sherlock Holmes, supported by Hilda Dorrington and the Carl Lawson players. Plans are at Allen's.

NOPS bow out but they'll return as Newbury Musical Theatre Society

The Revenge of Sherlock Holmes – the Musical, at Arlington Arts. Bookmarks from Thursday October 16 to Saturday October 25

THIS musical by Leslie Bricusse did not have the same success as Sing the World If You've Seen One in spite of its more accessible plot which has Moriarty's bewitched daughter seeking revenge on Holmes but her father's death. Directed by Jeremy Mann, the action opens with Holmes recovering from his assisted grave after the fight with his old enemy at the Reichenbach Falls, a fight in which Moriarty's disguised survivor, a did her? Holmes' exacting nemesis, clues implying that Moriarty does and he sets out to discover the truth for he "finds London giddy without a life worthy of his shell".

After a slightly uneven opening, things improved considerably, largely due to the fine singing of the ensemble: Martin Howes, Scott Taylor, Damon Blaize. This group of lads, always bright and perky, had some of the best numbers and Shazan Blake as Wiggins came into his own - this part was made for him.

The previously-voiced Jamie Ledwith announced himself as the new Holmes and the dialogue between him and Doctor Watson can certainly be believably performed from Paul (Brockland) was slick, very natural and often extremely funny.

As Moriarty's daughter, the wistful Bella, Claire Bowden, in a stunning red dress, didn't quite fit in with the rest of the show. She did though with Jamie Ledwith was particularly enjoyable.

Shazan Bowden, playing Holmes' housekeeper Mrs Hudson, was a gorgeously endearing delight, especially when telling us about her Lucy Life.

Perhaps best of all was the chorus member Apples and Pears, gloriously misnamed, who performed full of good humour, telling us of much rehearsal with choreographer Natasja Rogers. Twenty out of 30 for the superb programme layout, but one out of 30 for that appalling wig to the moirée were - a pity too fat, even for what was the equivalent of the 'Boat and water' act in a pantomime - and would change it before so many white chins, however it ruined the grimy London of the time!

What a change it must have been for the society now to be renamed Newbury Musical Theatre Society to be at Arlington with three matinees, and by the permanently brilliant Michael Evans above and in front of them - no grins about lack of a pit now.

This will be the last and very enjoyable production from the Newbury Musical Society, formed in 1912, but there is a non-determined air about this group which suggests well. Farewell NMTS, we loved you, welcome and good luck NMFS.

Charles Leftwich

A Hitherto Unpublished Episode in the Life of the Great Detective. Skit, by Charles Leftwich. Produced on Tuesday, Jan. 7, at the Rehearsal Theatre Padlock Domes.....Mr Charles Leftwich Dr Jotson.....Mr Hubert Woodward Billikin.....Master Andrew Baird Mr B. Lowe Parr.....Mr Leslie Kyle Professor Notoriety.....Mr Wilfred S. Stanford Murgatroyd Parr.....Miss Grace Vicar Few stories offer such rich opportunities of burlesque as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes series. Indeed, the wily detective himself, with his sleuthhound proclivities, his wonderful powers of deduction, his unerring instinct, and his unfailing tact, is an easy prey to the lampoonist. Mr Charles Leftwich, who introduced him to a fashionable audience at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Tuesday evening under the name of "Padlock Domes," has done his spiriting gently. He has given us an investigator who snaps at a corollary, or builds up a thesis of crime on the instant. True, his deductions are on the two-and-two-are-four principle, and his conclusions irresistibly simple, perfectly obvious, and inevitably true. His faithful friend, Dr. Jotson, is obsessed with admiration of him. Indeed, no exponent of the value of intuitive perception in any corner of the earth could have handled the startlingly sudden disappearance of Mr B. Lowe Parr's wastepaper basket with such comic certitude as Padlock Domes. We discover him in the gayest of patchwork dressing gowns, seated in his apartment in Bakerloo-street. He for a moment deceives his fidus Achates, Dr. Jotson, by his protean proclivities, but no one can mistake the inscrutable mystery solver, with his pipe. His meditative mood is disturbed by the agitated entrance of Mr B. Lowe Parr, of the Stock Exchange, who mourns the sudden disappearance of his green Japanese wastepaper basket. ## Charles H. Lester

SHERLOCK HOLMES APPEARS IN DUNDEE SHERIFF COURT OVER PURCHASE OF ARMY RIGGUT For a Disguise Charles H. Lester, theatrical manager, 9 Kinross Street, Dundee, has during the present week been appearing in the Empire Theatre, Dundee, in the drama, "The Bank of England," in the role of Sherlock Holmes. This afternoon he appeared before Sheriff Campbell Smith on a contravention of the Army Act. The circumstances connected with the case were somewhat peculiar. David Craig, millworker, Rosebank Street, called at the Empire Theatre last week offering a soldier's khaki uniform for sale. Mr Lester was busy rehearsing, and the lad was told to call back. This he did in the evening, and as Mr Lester was engaged on the stage he told his stage manager to close the bargain. The bundle of clothes was bought for 5s, but they lay untouched until a detective called to inquire about the matter. The bundle was found to contain an overcoat, three tunics, a waist belt, and a cap. Mr A. Burns Petrie, who represented Mr Lester, said it was a technical offense. His client was unaware that it was illegal to buy the uniform. He did not know what was in the bundle, and there was no intention of buying the thing at a very cheap rate. The Sheriff said Mr Lester had far too much good faith for a theatrical manager, and imposed a fine of 6s, with the alternative of twenty-four hours in prison. David Craig, millworker, Rosebank Street, was also charged with a contravention of the Army Act. Fiscal Agnew said the accused was acquainted with a private in the Highland Light Infantry, who was dismissed after undergoing a sentence of 112 days for striking an officer. It was the man's uniform that he sold to the stage manager. Craig stated that the man told him he had been discharged, and that he could do what he liked with his uniform. The Sheriff fined him 30s, with the alternative of twenty days in prison. Dundee Evening Telegraph, Friday 1 October 1909.

Raymond Robinson Lovell

Mr. Joseph Milligan himself aroused the worse in the best of us for his really excellent portrayal of the rashly Ryott, while Mr. Raymond Lovell makes a perfect Sherlock Holmes—in looks, words and deeds—according to the author's original conception of that wonderful man. A well restrained performance is given by Mrs. Patricia McNab, who has the meekest part of Edie Steiner, the terrorised, and yet self-possessed, surviving step-daughter of Dr. Ryott. Dr. Watson comes to life in the hands of Mr. Charles M. Julian, and Miss Rita Karmann is delightful as Lillie, page to Sherlock Holmes. Mrs. Stanton, Ryott's house-keeper and semi-accomplice in his crime, is the part entrusted to Miss Alice Greenwood, and she carries out her role with distinction. Lesser important characters are portrayed by the other members of the company, and the play also introduces a few local faces, who appear in the first act as a coroner's jury.

"The Speckled Band" is the best of the four good plays so far presented by Mr. Milligan and his colleagues, and those who like a first class mystery play presented in a most commendable manner should attend the Grand either to-night or to-morrow.
