It is difficult to say whether the play has lost or gained interest by the strange resurrection which took place some time ago. The last scene in which there is a meeting and a parting between Sherlock Holmes and Alice Faulkner has lost its pathetic significance by the knowledge that the great detective, instead of losing his life in his memorable meeting with Moriarty at a lovely spot in the Alps, as we were wont to think, really made his escape. Indeed in the light of later events as faithfully recorded in the pages of the "Strand Magazine," some portions of the dialogue lose their meaning, and the strange foreboding of Sherlock when Professor Moriarty solemnly warns him that he will take a trip to the Continent, and there meet his doom, seems a trifle ridiculous. Perhaps, however, to a large number of people the chief character is enhanced by the further proof of his supernatural cleverness and the removal of the shadow of his approaching sad end, under which, previously, the last act has unfolded has rendered the piece more pleasurable. "Sherlock Holmes" is now excellent and delightful comedy, with no cloud to mar it from beginning to end. It is splendid fun all through, highly charged with excitement. The audience roars with laughter and delight as time after time, with diabolical cleverness, the great detective outwits his enemies. The scene where Moriarty and Holmes meet, and that of the gas chamber, from which the detective escapes by deluding his would-be captors, by means of a lighted cigar, are thrilling and amusing even when one knows beforehand how it is all going to end. The piece is played by a capable company. Sherlock Holmes, as drawn both in the story and the artist's sketches, is admirably realised by Mr Kenneth Rivington. Mr Fred Inwood plays the not too strenuous part of Dr Watson perfectly, and Miss Florence Raddcliffe makes an excellent Alice Faulkner. One of the most interesting and laughable parts in the whole play is that of "Billy," the clever little page-boy, and this is capitally taken by Mr Chas. Chaplin. Mr Arthur B. Murray does full justice to the second greatest figure in the plot, Professor Moriarty, and the characters of Larrabee and Madge Larrabee, which perform such an important part in the piece are in the capable hands of Mr Ernest Gray and Miss Carrie Lacey. THE new Revue, which I announced last week, is going ahead splendidly. The book is being written by Mr. Philip Yorke (the Tivoli's new manager) and Mr. Charles Raymond, with lyrics by Mr. Roland Carse, and its promise well. Last night I inspected the scenes, models, and "property" designs for this apparently daring topical play, and very pleasantly and quietly these designs pan out. The scenes start with a very high-up-in-the-world part of London, and end with the chief spot concerned with

The Coronation.

The "props." include an airship, framed after a model that should please certain firms connected with the Tobacco Trusts, and steered by a manager whom you all know. There is also a peculiar moon which plays an important part as Prologue.

* * *

But perhaps the most interesting features to be found in this Revue to be produced on June 16 will be sundry important impersonations. These will include

Marie Lloyd as Cecilia Loftus as Marguerite, Little Tich as Jean De Reszke as Faust, George Robey as a Half Red-Faced Sherlock Holmes (afterwards Kitchener, afterwards De Wet), and Charles Raymond as Sir Henry Irving as Manager and as Mephistopheles.

Many stars will take part in Mr. Philip Yorke's new and novel revue, due next month at the Tivoli. Marie Lloyd as Cecilia Loftus playing Marguerite, Little Tich as Jean de Reszke playing Faust, George Robey as Sherlock Holmes, Charles Raymond as Sir Henry Irving, and Mr. Beerbohm Tree are among the interesting impersonations that will be introduced. Mr. Henry Moore is also engaged to appear. The book for this topical revue is from the pen of the Tivoli manager and Mr. Charles Raymond, with lyrics by Mr. Roland Carse.

NEWCASTLE
Sherlock Holmes And
The Case Of The Christmas Curse

THIS IS undoubtedly the best of the North. Geordie humour. Geordie cast, loads of effort which returns pantomime to its roots is a huge success.

There are no grandiose stage sets, no "big" names in the cast, just actors and actresses working within their capabilities and to the audience.

This production is full of fun, and the audience revel in its freedom. The goodies are pure white, while the baddies, Sootie (Edward) (Jeremy Swain) gives the part enough heat to get the mums and dads boozing.

Local radio and TV presenter Alan Robson (Sherlock Holmes) tries to keep the rest of the crazy gang in check and their combined antics had the packed auditorium in stitches.

Alan Robson stars in Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Curse at Newcastle Playhouse.

Denny Ferguson (Dr Watson) was in top form and the rapport between him, the rest of the cast and the audience was brilliant.

His OTT Geordie accent was reminiscent of the best of the old-time comics of the past, all of whom graced the boards in pantomime.

Mick McNally (Prof Lestrade), more noted for his worldly-wise television programmes, Joe Caffrey (Roger Slick) and Jayne McKenzie (Lucinda Sneydy) all worked hard, and although at times there was an amateurish feel to the production, overall it was a superb effort.

Occasionally "national" productions arrive and miss out totally with their attempts at regional funnies, but the cast of Sherlock know their roots and play to them.

A great show, summed up by a completely drained Alan Robson when he declared at the final curtain: "We hope you've enjoyed the show - now 'sodaway byem!"

ST. JAMES'S (Lessee, Mr. Richard Flanagan; Manager, Mr. P. Ryan-Smith).—For the first time in Manchester, Mr. M. Romenney presents By London's Mighty River. Mr. Douglas R. Munro emphasises the villainy of Hawksley Graham. Lionel Cairstairs has a manly exponent in Mr. J. R. Darnley. Mr. A. Russell successfully doubles the rôles of John Broadley and Sherlock Holmes, Mr. G. Pain makes a typical Isaacs. Mr. Leno Free scores with a humorous embodiment of Billy Bodkin, ably helped by Miss Ada Fordyce as Kitty. Miss M. Pascoe plays sympathetically as Mudge Mayfield. Miss Ella Merrydew as Graham's wife ably assumes her disguises.
